Annual Meeting Information

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of participating in the ASCCA 22nd Annual Meeting, attendees will be able to:

- Evaluate the current basic science and clinical applications relevant to the management of acute hepatic failure.
- Summarize the physiologic basis and clinical applications of non invasive methods to assess intravascular fluid balance and cardiac output.
- Debate the various methods to avoid further lung injury to patients with respiratory failure while maximizing benefits of current therapies.
- Outline the role of statins in the care of the critically ill.
- Identify interventions that both reduce and support neurological injury in various settings for critically ill patients.
- Review the regulatory/ quality issues germane to current critical care and what may be expected in the near future.
- Debate the role of electronic information systems in the Intensive Care Unit and their role in improving management of sepsis, bleeding and acute renal injury.
- Identify controversial management issues in caring for ICU patients with multiple organ dysfunctions.
- Evaluate the role of anesthesiologist/intensivists in the setting of large scale disasters.

CME Accreditation

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the Essential Areas and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education through the joint sponsorship of the American Society of Anesthesiologists and the American Society of Critical Care Anesthesiologists. The American Society of Anesthesiologists is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The American Society of Anesthesiologists designates this educational activity for a maximum of 8.75 *AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)*TM. Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
